FYS-101 First Year Seminar (3 Credits)    Add Course to Plan

The intent of this course is to establish the expectations of life in an academic setting and as a local, national and global citizen. The foundations of communication and intellectual skills will be introduced in this course. These skills will be built through the interdisciplinary exploration of a common regional, national or glabal theme. This course will include a common reading assignment designed to provide a common introduction to academic life at Morehead State University. This course satisfies the core requirement for general education.
