EAGLES SOAR TO THE BIG DANCE

PAGE 26
Dear Alumni, Parents, and Friends,
The historic economic turmoil confronting the nation and the world is affecting individuals, families, and institutions broadly. We entered this period in a position of strength, having made significant progress toward creating institutional efficiencies, implementing our strategic and business plans, and reviewing our academic programs for excellence.

Today, economic uncertainty presents the greatest challenge facing the University. However, our top priority continues to be people . . . our students, our employees, and the communities we serve. First and foremost, this means doing all that we can to ensure that our students remain enrolled and are able to afford a quality, higher education.

We began this time of economic hardship stronger as a result of the generosity of our supporters, whom we acknowledge in the donor report included in this issue. We are indebted to their generosity and the commitment of students, faculty, staff, alumni and families — all true stewards of Morehead State University.

You will hopefully notice a change to the look and feel of this edition of Statement. The excitement surrounding campus with the success of our academic and athletic programs has spread to our publications – both print and online. Please be sure to share the MSU story – and your MSU story - with others.

During these challenging times, I am reminded of the strength, integrity, and character of the MSU community. This spring, we will celebrate the great things happening here as part of the first annual Spring Celebration. I invite each of you to join us for as many of the events as your schedule will allow. You should be proud of this institution; I continue to be proud and honored to serve as your president.

All proceeds will benefit MSU’s Fund for Excellence that supports the University’s highest priorities. Thank you!
One of the earliest sociological thinkers, Max Weber, maintained that a researcher’s choice of topics for study should have “value relevance,” or more specifically, should be about issues or concerns to their culture during the researcher’s lifetime.

Dr. Suzanne Tallichet gets ideas for her research from real world issues. “My general guide has been to simply follow my interests which really means following my heart. To me, research without that kind of passion is sterile and mundane. It is of no use to anyone,” she said.

That philosophy, and subsequent research, led to her being named the 2007 Distinguished Researcher at Morehead State University.

“While analyzing my data from interviews with women miners, I heartily admired their courage and strength despite their flaws and foibles. Their perseverance and endurance in the face of adversity has been inspirational,” she said.

Dr. Tallichet’s work on women in mining was qualitative, which requires the researcher to engage herself in the field and be an active participant in the research process. It also requires the researcher to do some soul-searching and self-examination as part of that process.

A case study focusing on job-level sex segregation among women working at a large underground mine in southern West Virginia became part of her dissertation for the Ph.D. degree. In the fall of 1990, she interviewed 10 female and several male miners, union and company officials and the mine superintendent. After joining the faculty in MSU’s Department of Sociology, Social Work and Criminology in 1993, she returned to the site during the summers of 1995 and 1996 to conduct some repeat interviews as well as add new informants.

“To date, there are relatively few journal articles or books about women coal miners,” Dr. Tallichet said. “My work is the only study that focused entirely on a single cohort of women working at the same mine for a prolonged period of time.”

Another issue that was borne from personal experience that became a research topic was animal cruelty. Having grown up around dogs and served as a volunteer at a shelter, she encountered several severe episodes of animal abuse.

Every new experience left her asking, “why do people do this?” So she set out to find some answers. That was the basis for research she completed with criminologist Christopher Hensley. The results became data for 10 articles and started to help fill a void in the animal cruelty literature.

Occasionally, she has been asked why she’s interested in such a grisly, grotesque topic, she said. “The answer is simple. You cannot stop something from happening if you don’t understand it. We simply do not know enough about the topic; but the more we discover, the more we know how animal cruelty is learned, subsequently manifested and linked to human violence.

Eklund’s creative production award is poetic justice

George Eklund has established himself as a contender in the field of poetry writing. His poems have regularly appeared in journals with such major authors as Hyden Carruth, Adrienne Rich, Marvin Bell, John Ashbery, David Wagoner, Gerald Stern, W.S. Merwin and Donald Revell.

He was included in a major international anthology published by Simon and Schuster and was a featured poet in Ireland’s Virtual Writer. He was the first runner-up in Poets & Writers 2004 contest and has had works placed in a variety of publications across the U.S.

At the state level, the Kentucky Arts Council recognized Eklund with its Professional Assistance Grant in 1990 and 2004. He was awarded the Al Smith Fellowship in Poetry in 1992.

He was honored to be recognized for his creative work: “For me to join the list of previous winners is especially meaningful, since these artists and musicians have been my inspiration for many years. To imagine myself among them is both gratifying and humbling.

“When an institution honors a poet, it indicates that language and freedom of expression are valued highly by the University. I am pleased and proud to know that Morehead State University has a strong tradition for celebrating creative excellence along with scholarly achievement.

“I hope the tradition of this award gives students a very positive understanding of how the institution values its artists. I hope they can see that their own creative work is part of Morehead State’s mission to serve the region and the nation,” he added.

“The Morehead community is a great place for writers,” Eklund said, noting that he had benefited greatly from the high level of interest and support that is generated for the literary arts. He cited the Kentucky Folk Art Center, CoffeeTree Books, the MSU Bookstore and the Department of English, Foreign Languages and Philosophy as instruments in making the town and the University a hospitable place for writers.

“Visiting authors are always impressed with the level of interest and support at work in our community,” he said. “I have always felt this nurturing environment as important to the growth of my own work; it’s one of the reasons I have stayed here for 18 years.”

The Steve Hamilton Celebrity Golf Tournament

June 19-20, 2009

The Steve Hamilton Celebrity Golf Tournament, which honors the memory of the Morehead State University Hall of Famer and former big league pitcher, will be held at Eagle Trace Golf Course on Friday and Saturday, June 19-20.

MSU is reaching out to a wide variety of celebrities with ties to Kentucky. Celebrities already committed to participate include former major leaguers Walt Terrell, Jim Coates, Ralph Terry and Willie Blair; as well as Atlanta Falcons quarterback Chris Redman and former NBA star Jerry Lucas. Terrell and Blair played for Hamilton at MSU.

The Steve Hamilton Celebrity Golf Tournament is one component of a larger project that presents an exciting opportunity to honor “the old left-hander.” The goals of the Steve Hamilton Project are to create a permanent display for his memorabilia collection; to increase the Steve Hamilton Scholarship Fund; and to establish the Steve Hamilton Athletic Director’s Fund which will target the most urgent needs of athletic programs.

A healthy partnership

A new health sciences facility in Morehead will soon be constructed through a partnership of Morehead State University, the University of Kentucky and St. Claire Regional Medical Center.

The facility will house MSU’s departments of nursing and imaging sciences, UK’s physician assistant and family nurse practitioner programs, in addition to a freestanding primary care clinic, and comprehensive health education center.

The clinic will serve as the primary training site for the SCR/UK family practice residency program and will include examination rooms, a dental suite, as well as provide for a clinical laboratory and basic radiology services. The comprehensive health education center will be designed to accommodate a wide range of continuing education/workshop programs, teleconferencing and telemedicine initiatives, specialized professional development/enrichment opportunities for health-care providers, and rural health research activities.

The space for MSU’s departments of nursing and imaging sciences will include lecture and laboratory classrooms to support the associate and baccalaureate degree nursing programs, the radiologic technology program, and the sonography, computed tomography, and magnetic resonance program options. Also included will be faculty/staff offices and conference areas. In addition, discussion with UK continues regarding other possible educational training programs to be located at the Center.

Additionally, space will be provided for anticipated growth in these programs and the planned implementation of MSU’s new master’s degrees in nursing and in nuclear medicine. Similar space will be available to support UK’s master’s-level programs for physician assistant and family nurse practitioner programs.

Why I support MSU . . .

“MSU has played an important role in my life. The education I received prepared me well for a successful career in corporate America. In addition to a quality classroom experience, faculty and staff express a personal interest in the students’ development. Being the first person in my family to receive a bachelor’s degree, the added attention was significant in my professional development and confidence. For this I am most appreciative and support MSU.”

Daragh Porter (77)
2008 Circle of Excellence President’s Circle Member

Employer matching gifts upgrade the significance of every qualifying gift; however, matching gifts cannot be applied to the gift to enable it to reach recognition level.

To show the University’s appreciation for the support of members of the Circle of Excellence, these donors receive several unique benefits including a specially designed broach or lapel pin signifying their level of support, an MSU Circle of Excellence static decal signifying their level of support, recognition in the annual donor report, recognition at an MSU donor stewardship event, and special invitations to other annual campus events. Federal government makes it easier to give IRA disbursements

As part of 2008 Emergency Economic Stabilization Act, the federal government is once again allowing contributions to Morehead State University to be made for Individual Retirement Accounts (IRA’s). The gift amount is, in turn, excluded from your taxable income. This smart way to give only applies to donors ages 70 ½ and older, and the IRA manager must transfer funds directly to a charity. As with any decision involving your financial or estate plans, we urge you to seek the advice of professional counsel.

The MSU Planned Giving Web site, www.morehead.planyourlegacy.org also can provide you with details on planned giving. The page offers general information as well as research tools such as a gift calculator to show the benefits of making a planned commitment to MSU. You may also contact the Office of Development at 1-877-690-4483 for more detailed information.

Why I support MSU . . .

“The educators who taught me how to speak in front of a group, gave me a basic understanding of accounting, introduced me to the incredible world of psychology, and fed my fascination with history, all provided me with the basic skills I have used every day of my life. Morehead is my home town, and MSU is my University.”

Every semester, MSU students call alumni and friends of the University to ask for contributions to the Fund for Excellence. Through the Fund for Excellence, the greatest needs of the University are met. Gifts can also be directed to the area or fund of your choice — benefiting any part of MSU that holds special memories for you or for which you have hopes of additional progress. Your gifts offer the chance to expand on the University’s success during a time when state funding proves challenging.

More than 4,500 MSU alumni contributed to the University through the MSU Foundation last year. If you have not yet shown your support this calendar year, please make your gift when an MSU student calls. We thank you for your support of our Annual Fund Program!
Why I support MSU...

“I truly believe college is what you make of it, a place that allows you to grow and learn about yourself. I always thought I would go to school, get my degree and get a job, but along the way something happened—I fell in love with the university and everything about the college experience. I am so proud to call MSU my alma mater; it is a place that I hold dear in my heart, a place that helped define me as a person and as a working professional.”

The instigation of the Rachel Barton Pine String Residency began with an e-mail message that I received from Mrs. Harpham:

Greetings from Washington:
You are about to wind up your year if you haven’t already. In thinking forward to next year or on I have had an idea which is just forming in my mind…a concert and a masterclass by Rachel Barton Pine, a first class artist who does this sort of thing. She has a concert honoring Maud Powell, the great American violinist, who was the first violinist to record for His Masters Voice, the first violinist to play the Sibelius, and Dvorak violin concerti in this country, etc. She stood in for Fritz Kreisler for his concerts during the 1st World War, when his being Austrian made his name unpopular, to say the least. Last year Rachel played the Maud Powell concert here at the Women’s Museum of Art. It was just remarkable. In the audience, among many others, were Ruth Bader Ginsberg, Supreme Court Justice, and Leonard Slatkin, music director of the NSO…I am on the board of the Maud Powell Society, hence my great interest in this particular concert. I would like to talk to you about whether or not the string program at Morehead is drawing string players, etc. That is a lot of money for me to invest if there isn’t fertile soil to accept the benefits of a great player and teacher for a one-time thing…. Let me hear from you at your convenience. It would be good to have a one-on-one talk. Meanwhile e-mail communications serve very well.

Warm regards,
Virginia

As Virginia eludes in her message, the Morehead State string program has been in a rebuilding mode for the past few years. And as a loyal 1939 alumna of MSU, Ms. Harpham spearheaded the rebuilding effort with the establishment of the Virginia and Evelyn Harpham Music Scholarship for String Players, “a scholarship endowment to recognize the importance of string education at Morehead State University and benefit music students who excel or have special interest in string performance.”

Armed with the Harpham scholarship, and with additional support from the University, the music department faculty began the process of rebuilding the University’s string program with the philosophy of supporting string education throughout eastern Kentucky and the surrounding states. The faculty began the rebuilding effort first by creating the Tri-State Honor String Orchestra Clinic, a string education event now in its fourth year of operation. The clinic, which now hosts over 230 participants, offers middle- and high- school age string players a full day of large ensemble and sectional clinics with MSU faculty and guest conductors.

Also consistent with the philosophy of supporting string education was the successful establishment of a string program in the local Rowan County schools. Founded by Morehead State’s orchestra director, Christina Hartke-Towell, financed with a grant from the local Lucille Caudill Little Foundation, and partially supported with a supply of instruments from the University, the string program at McBrayer Elementary School has grown to enroll over 70 children and is now expanding into the middle grades.

With these and other successful efforts to re-establish the string program at Morehead State, the stage was set to accept Ms. Harpham’s offer to host Rachel Barton Pine in residence at MSU. What’s more, with the development of additional resources, including funding from the Buckner and Sally S. Hinkle Endowment for Humanities, Southern Arts Federation, Morehead State Public Radio, and other University sponsors, we were able to expand Virginia’s original masterclass and recital idea to a three-day festival of music and educational programming.

Targeted for school-age children, university students, and the community, Ms. Pine’s residency was held November 13-15, in conjunction with the 2008 Tri-State Honor String Orchestra Clinic weekend. Events included a presentation on charitable foundations and philanthropy, a masterclass and recital for Morehead State students, a fiddling and classical violin workshop at MSU’s Kentucky Center for Traditional Music (joining in the fun was MSU President Wayne D. Andrews and Virginia Harpham), a recital and discussion for grades K-5 and 6-8 students at Rowan County Middle School, a classical jam session with the Morehead State music faculty, violin sectionals with high school honor orchestra violinists, and a finale solo recital and concert with the Tri-State Honors String Orchestra.

As anyone who has had the opportunity to hear Ms. Pine perform can attest, she is an electrifying artist. But to me, what makes her performances particularly rewarding is not only her expressive range, but her special ability to “set up” each piece with an engaging commentary that brings the music to life for all listeners, musically schooled or not. It’s notable that she dazzled not only the young people and general audience members, but also the highly trained musicians of Morehead State’s music faculty. During her visit to Morehead (by way of London!) Ms. Pine demonstrated her unique ability to communicate effectively to all age groups and captivate the musical sensibilities of even the most seasoned music connoisseur.

Members of the Maud Powell Society for Music and Education will appreciate that Rachel Barton Pine’s residency at Morehead State University bridged the generations. Children through aged adults were not only treated to Rachel’s wonderful playing and teaching, but also to her orations that so effectively link the intentions of the composer with the creativity of the performer and receptors of the listener. In her own way, Pine breaks down the traditional barriers between styles, genres, and people. In fact, it could be said that she has become—with her spirit, ideals and sense of purpose—the Maud Powell of our time.

Yet, the span of the generational divide between Maud Powell and Rachel Barton Pine is also buttressed by one of our own, Virginia Harpham. Ms. Harpham was honored at the finale concert with the presentation of the coveted Maud Powell Society Award, presented by Pine. As one might expect, Ms. Harpham was surprised and thrilled with the receipt of the award—especially given that Pine presented it to her, it was presented during a weekend that so exemplified the ideals of Maud Powell, and that it was received on the same Button Auditorium stage where she performed so many times during her college days at Morehead State University. It was a special moment for us all!

The school-age children and University students—who now have autographed Rachel Barton Pine String Residency posters hanging on their walls—will long remember their experiences during those three days in November 2008. And for us, who are committed to the development of the Morehead State string program and support string education throughout the region, we are excited about the energy that this very successful event brought to our cause. Ms. Harpham is most certainly satisfied that her investment in the residency had a positive impact on students at her alma mater and in the school-based string programs. We are most fortunate to be able to call Ms. Harpham one of our own and claim Pine as our newly found friend. Through them both, the legacy of Maud Powell is alive and well at Morehead State University.

EAGLES SOAR TO THE BIG DANCE

The Eagle men’s basketball team competed in the NCAA tournament for the first time since 1984.
Morehead State University kept it close in the first half, however, top seeded Louisville pulled away in the second half to beat the Eagles, 74-54, In front of a crowd of 12, 499 in the first-round of the NCAA Tournament at the University of Dayton Arena.

After being tied 4-4, Louisville reeled off 13 of the next 16 points to take a 17-7 advantage.

The Eagles kept the fans in the game by going on a 15-5 run. Maze Stallworth drilled a 3-pointer with 7:35 left that deadlocked the contest at 22-22. Steve Peterson’s tip-in with 6:36 remaining put Morehead State on top, 24-22.

Louisville regrouped and pushed ahead 34-27, but couldn’t shake MSU. Demonte Harper drilled a 15-footer to bring the Eagles to within 34-33 with 1:11 to play in the first half. Louisville added a free throw and led at intermission 35-33.

In the second half, the Cards showed why they are the overall top seeded team in tournament. Louisville opened on a 22-6 run on its way to outscoring Morehead State 39-21 in the second half.

“It was a typical Louisville-type performance,” said Morehead State coach Donnie Tyndall (93). “What they try and do is just wear you down and wear you down. That’s been Rick’s M.O. forever. But I thought our kids played extremely hard... Unfortunately, we ran into maybe the best team in college basketball tonight.”

Leon Buchanan, MSU’s only senior, closed his career with a 17-point effort to top the Eagles. Kenneth Faried recorded his 25th double-double of the season with 14 points and 11 rebounds while Stallworth also finished in double figures with 14.

Samardo Samuels led Louisville with 15 points.

“All these teams are playing tremendous basketball, and that’s what this tournament is all about,” Louisville coach Rick Pitino said of lower-seeded teams such as Cal State-Northridge, East Tennessee State and Morehead State, which have given high seeds tough games in the tournament. “We didn’t play bad in the first half, shot 50 percent. They hung with us.

“So often we don’t want to give the other team - whether it be East Tennessee State or Northridge or Morehead State - credit,” Pitino said. “But Morehead State was terrific.”

Morehead State ended the season with a record of 20-16. The 2008-09 Eagles joined the 1983-84 NCAA Tournament team and the 2002-03 Ohio Valley Conference Co-Champions as MSU squads that reached the 20-win mark.

“I think this team put MSU basketball back on the map,” Tyndall said.
